

Patrick Maggs

Patrick's practice encompasses a wide span of defence work, from theft and fraud through to murder and serious violence. He prosecutes for the CPS (including the Special Casework Unit), various local authorities and Trading Standards.

Patrick has appeared as both leading and junior counsel in a wide range of cases including murder, grievous bodily harm, fraud, kidnap, blackmail, serious sexual offences, firearms, drug offences, money laundering and confiscation proceedings.

Patrick has substantial experience of a range of POCA and confiscation matters, including cash detention proceedings, at all levels including the Court of Appeal and proceedings in the High Court. He has been described by the Court of Appeal as arguing his case "with both skill and discretion".

He has been instructed by the Police Federation to defend police officers in criminal matters. Patrick has experience of the Consumer Credit Tribunal system, including representing an ex-Detective Inspector in respect of alleged corporate consumer credit breaches.

He has acted as independent counsel when the Metropolitan Police have sought to search solicitors' offices in respect of criminal allegations.

He has wide experience in Prison Law, from appearances before the Parole Board through to disciplinary hearings.

He has an occasional speciality defending the retailers, possessors, and producers of pornography.

Patrick is also instructed in local authority quasi-civil proceedings, trading standards and regulatory matters, including:

- Food hygiene compliance;
- Motor vehicle retail fraud;
- Counterfeit goods;
- Prosecuting a national electrical retailer for product liability complaints;
- Prosecuting a national chain of restaurants for compliance offences;
- Defending a national chain of estate agents for Property Misdescription Act matters;
- Defending a national chain of car parks for Companies Act offences;
- Defending a national home improvement firm;
- Prosecuting a national travel agent for Trade Descriptions Act offences;
- Advising the Licensed Taxi Drivers Association.

Patrick has been instructed in this country and abroad to defend in Courts-Martial cases.

"Patrick has an excellent manner with the client. He has a softly-spoken and personable manner which quickly wins the trust of clients, opponents and jurors alike. By contrast, when in Court he is a powerful and effective advocate who hones in on the important points with a laser-like focus, and presents them to the jury with unshakable (and justified) confidence."
